Miguel Ángel Sáez García

En el mes de octubre de 1984, el gobierno de Felipe González decidió cerrar la vieja fábrica siderúrgica de Sagunto, dejando así a España sin la posibilidad de contar en el futuro con una moderna planta integral costera capaz de competir en el seno del mercado común europeo, al que nuestro país iba a unirse quince meses después. Las consecuencias de la política industrial de los años ochenta para la economía nacional no se hicieron esperar en forma de déficit permanente de productos siderúrgicos con el exterior. Miguel Ángel Sáez García y Pablo Díaz Morlán analizan en este libro las verdaderas causas de aquella decisión política y cuentan la historia completa de la fábrica saguntina, desde su creación por el empresario vizcaíno Ramón de la Sota en el primer tercio del siglo XX, hasta su controvertida desaparición, hace ahora veinticinco años.
